Galleries and will be sold there beginning March 14. In addition to many portraits by famous engravers of the eventeenth century, there are numerou examples by older masters.

In the group of Rembrandts there is an impression of the "Christ Healing the Sick," the so-called Hundred Guilders Print and a third impression of the "Christ Before Pilate." Plates of almost equal rarity and interest are 'The Nativity" and "St. Hubert" by Albrecht Durer. By Cornells Visscher there are eleven engravings, including the "Rat Catcher," the "Gellius de Bouma" and the "Old Coquette."

In a collection in which portraits take in are a place a representation of Robert Nanteuli is expected, and the portraits by him include some of his most important works. There is the "Pompone de Bellievre," "Colbert," "Anne pone de Bellievre," "Colbert," Anne "Autriche" and the four engravings of Louis XIV, after his own designs, Faithorne, the English engraver, whose nitation continually grown is repre-nied by "Catherine of Braganza," enrietta Maria" and "Oliver Crom-1." Cromwell is shown in armor, aur-inded by curiously naive symbols, but re is no mistaking the look of force that Falthorne has bestowed upon him.

"Queen Elizabeth" of England is par-trayed by Crispin Van de Pass in a gown trayed by Crispin Van de Pass in a gown ts be seen in the paintings of Spanish princesses by Velasquez.

Geraldine Farrar isn't a Germano

That is the burden of a blast which, ren though it reached the public trough an intermediary last night, still through an intermediary last night, still bore traces of that emotional fervor which drives impresariée wild and goes under the head of temperament.

Miss Farrar almost two years ago was accused of writing a letter in which she declared her love for her musical father-land, Germany. The story, printed and reprinted with a dozen variations, will not down, she says. She was patient for a time, but too much is enough, she says, and last night she issued a long statement full of blazing wrath and burning patriotism.

"Cousin Caruse" Flanked by "Serpent of Nile" and "Flower of Orient."

Invitations were sent out last week to a select little group of salubrities in the upper ranges of opera, concert and the drama for a Mexican breakfast party. Laurette Peg o' My Heart Tay-lor called up Helen Fontaine, who knows all the gossip that floats around in that rarefied atmosphere, and after the usual feminine fencing discovered that she too was one of the fortunate ones, and asked what she thought of the affair.

"Lissen, Laurette," the feminene impresario said, "since you ask me I'll be fair with you-I will. I think this little Mexican party is just another one of those Columbus affairs. They plan to get us all there, lock us in, have some Mexican bandits stick up the crowd, clean up all the valuables and beat it back across 'he border. But will I miss this Mexican party? Just ask me! Take it from me. Laurette, they are there—these Mexican affairs—an' be-
